

London Jewellery School Director, Jessica Rose Nominated for 'Spirit of London Award'

Young entrepreneur Jessica Rose has been shortlisted out of over 5,000 nominations for this years 'Spirit of London Awards' for her achievements with setting up and running the London Jewellery School, the UK's largest independent jewellery training centre based in Hatton Garden.

After being shortlisted by the category judges; dragons den star Theo Paphitis, Shadow Business & Enterprise Minister Chuka Umunna and MP and minister for work and pensions Chris Grayling, Jessica attended a prestigious event at number 10 Downing Street with the prime minister and a whole host of politicians and celebrities.

The grand finale will take place on Monday 10th October with the award ceremony at the Royal Albert Hall in which a short video will be played to the 3,000 strong audience about how Jessica set up the London Jewellery School with an aim to encourage and inspire others to enjoy making jewellery. The winner will also be announced so we are keeping our fingers and toes crossed but all the finalists have been praised as winners with only three remaining in each category.

"It is such an honor to be a finalist and I hope to encourage budding jewelers and entrepreneurs of the future to believe in themselves and follow their passion, whatever it may be" Jessica Rose
